Culture Matters: How Values Shape Human Progress edited by Samuel Huntington and Lawrence E. Harrison is basically an interesting discussion about how cultural values affect the progress of societies. I can't say that there were a lot of answers to why some societies are able to develop easier than others.

In "Cultures Count," Samuel P.
Huntington offers a partial explanation for the differing experiences of undeveloped third world nations and those nations (which may be referred to as the new "second world" nations) that are successfully developing. He emphasizes cultural values such as "thrift, investment, hard work, education, organization, and discipline."

Samuel Phillips Huntington was an American political scientist, adviser and academic. He spent more than half a century at Harvard University, where he was director of Harvard's Center for International Affairs and the Albert J. Weatherhead III University Professor. During the presidency of Jimmy Carter, Huntington was the White House Coordinator of Security Planning for the National Security Council. During the 1980s Apartheid era in South Africa, he served as an adviser to P. W. Botha's Securi

Work of one of these two professors, Samuel Huntington, who had already anticipated this consoling message in a much discussed article which was subsequently enlarged into a book, The Clash of Civilisations and the Remaking of World Order. 'In the post-Cold War world,' he wrote there, 'the most important distinctions among peoples are not ideological, political or economic.'
